

Modernisation of the Institute of Meteorological Training and Research (IMTR) Kenya

The Met Office is working in collaboration with IMTR and Nairobi University to deliver a modernised training program that meets World Meteorological Organization (WMO) learning objectives for meteorologists

The basis of this project is a partnership between IMTR, a WMO regional training centre, and the Met Office College, to design, develop and co-deliver training for the benefit of the East African meteorological community. The benefits of this project will include an increase in resilience and adaptation to climate change and high impact weather events due to more knowledgeable and highly trained meteorologists and climatologists in the East Africa region.

Project components

This project includes the following elements:

- Designing a training course aimed at the East Africa region
- Train the trainer workshops
- Delivery of pilot Basic Instruction Package for Meteorologists (BIP-M) climatology training course

Workshop at Met Office head office, UK
